At this time, our rulers are rolling back restrictions because they have determined that their COVID policies are a political liability; and also because people increasingly are just refusing to go along with the nonsense. It is important that we not breathe a sigh of relief and assume that we are on the pathway to full restoration of our freedoms and putting this episode behind us. That is clearly not happening at all. The members of cabal that did this to us are going to strike again – and again and again if needed - in order to get their way.

Fear has been an effective tool for getting people to give up their rights and follow directions, so most likely it will be used again. And there is some evidence that HIV might be the virus that will be the subject of a renewed effort to terrify people.

In December 2021, several UK agencies announced a new action plan called "Towards Zero: the HIV Action Plan for England – 2022-2025."<sup>1</sup> A few days later, Joe Biden announced that the White House was committed to a plan to "end the HIV/AIDS epidemic by 2030."<sup>2</sup> And in early February, Prince Harry (good friend of the globalists) advised everyone to "know your status" and "go and get a test" for HIV. According to the Prince, normalizing testing can help to end new cases of HIV by 2030.<sup>3</sup>

A new HIV variant has been discovered in the Netherlands, and supposedly over 100 people have been diagnosed with this variant already. Additionally, some people are claiming that DNA from HIV is in the COVID vaccines and that the COVID vaccines might lead to HIV infection. Yet others are claiming that COVID vaccines might cause AIDS by damaging immune function.

People on both sides of the issue are making incorrect claims, and both sides are scaring people. While we should remain on high alert concerning the criminals in charge of our healthcare system and government, people should not be concerned about HIV, and in most cases AIDS.

Misunderstandings About HIV and AIDS

First, HIV does not cause AIDS. The misunderstandings about this issue are complex and are covered in detail in a 10-module course that we offer on this topic. I'll attempt to summarize a few important points here.

The "HIV causes AIDS" theory was promoted during the 1980s and 90s by none other than Anthony Fauci and a group of unethical public health officials at the National Institutes of Health, the Centers for Disease Control, and state and local health departments. The events of that time bear resemblance to what the entire world has experienced during the last two years with COVID-19. The public was told that there would be a worldwide epidemic, that all people were at equal risk, that the virus was spread through sexual intercourse, and that millions of people were going to die.

People were legitimately frightened, and HIV testing became common. Some officials promoted the idea that all healthcare workers should be tested – regularly. Contact tracing and reporting to government agencies was instituted. Ordering “positive” people to be quarantined was considered. Over 50 countries including the U.S. instituted immigration and tourism restrictions on infected people. Congress allocated billions of dollars for hospitals, clinics, and non-profit organizations.<sup>4</sup> Over $7 billion was spent by the federal government in 1994 alone.

But the hypothesis was incorrect. Even as evidence showing this to be the case became more and more clear, health officials failed to adjust the hypothesis which led to more and more wrong assumptions and decisions. HIV turned out to be a “passenger virus” that was harmless, and AIDS was not a transmissible disease, but rather affected certain populations of people. Most people dying of AIDS-type diseases were never infected with HIV.

Here is some information that support these claims

- Men are 10 times more likely to develop AIDS than women; gay men are much more likely than straight men. While viral susceptibility varies, the variation is generally due to factors like health status and age, not gender and sexual preference.
- Farr’s Law: infectious diseases spread exponentially and then decline. They are stopped by lack of new people to infect or by herd immunity like seasonal flu. The trajectory looks much like a bell curve.<sup>5</sup> HIV did not follow his pattern. Approximately one in 250 Americans has been HIV-positive since it could be detected in 1984 – the infection rate has remained the same.<sup>6</sup>
- AIDS also did not behave like a typical infectious disease either. Incidence increased steadily over a 15-year period. It did not explode and did not decline due to herd immunity. Its trajectory was more like lung cancer which increased steadily due to a lifestyle habit – smoking.<sup>7</sup>
- When it was apparent that an HIV/AIDS epidemic was not developing as projected, the CDC started increasing the number of AIDS-defining diseases in order to increase the number of AIDS patients. Low T-cell counts in asymptomatic people could be called AIDS. Cervical cancer was called cervical cancer UNLESS the woman was HIV-positive and then it was called AIDS. Tuberculosis was TB UNLESS the patient was HIV positive and then it was called AIDS.<sup>8</sup>
- Thirty percent of the population of sub-Saharan Africa was HIV positive but in one ten-year period only 250,000 cases of AIDS were reported to the WHO.<sup>9</sup>
- In Zaire – three million people were people infected, but only a few hundred patients developed AIDS<sup>10</sup>

- Uganda - one million people were infected, but only a few hundred patients developed AIDS.<sup>11</sup>
- Yet in the U.S., the numbers were totally different - out of one million HIV positive cases, 400,000 people developed AIDS.<sup>12</sup>

The inconsistencies are impossible to reconcile. In some cases, inconsistencies disappeared due to scientific misconduct. When 4621 clinically diagnosed AIDS patients who were not HIV positive showed up in a data set, instead of giving up on the HIV/AIDS hypothesis, Fauci invented a new disease – idiopathic CD4-lymphocytopenia. This allowed Fauci to hide this very inconvenient data set.<sup>13</sup>

The bottom line – HIV does not cause AIDS. AIDS, or acquired immunodeficiency syndrome develops in people who engage in particular lifestyle habits. In the 1980s and 1990s it affected promiscuous people who had habits such as multiple or even hundreds of sexual partners; and people who abused recreational drugs and alcohol. There is more to the story, ten slide sets and lectures worth – but this overview provides some insight.

Scaring People About HIV in 2022

People who are claiming that the vaccines can cause recipients to get the “AIDS virus” are making false claims. There is no “AIDS virus,” and being HIV-positive does not mean much, just as testing positive for SARS-CoV-2 does not mean much either.

Now, let’s circle back to the Netherlands and the claim that over 100 people have been infected with a new HIV variant. This has been represented as a new development, most likely to scare people. But it’s not. The 109 patients with the variant are part of an observational cohort called the AIDS Therapy Evaluation in the Netherlands (ATHENA) study.<sup>14</sup> These subjects had the variant dating back to 1992 and did not know it. Some researchers claim that it is more contagious and more virulent, but based on the information I’ve provided, this may not be significant. Even those making these claims admit that medications can stop transmission and reduce the chance of severe illness.<sup>15</sup>

Summary

Fear is being generated in many ways:

- It is possible that both infection with SARS-CoV-2 and/or the vaccines can result in testing [positive for HIV. In most cases this does not mean anything.
- HIV does not cause AIDS, but it is possible that the vaccines can weaken or destroy the immune system which could lead to developing AIDS, particularly in people who do not take care of themselves, are overweight, medicated, and have co-morbidities. This would be a good time to adopt good habits, lose weight and regain your health if you are concerned about this.

- Based on past behavior, it would not be surprising if the criminals in charge try to scare people with claims that HIV is spreading and millions of people are going to die of AIDS. Testing and contact tracing and quarantines and lockdowns will be the most likely response.
- The other side will spread the same false story about HIV and AIDS, but will attribute the cause to COVID and COVID vaccines.

Let's take a deep breath and hope that factual information and reason will prevail this time.
