

Another Federal Official Fesses Up

One by one, the criminals who promoted COVID-19 nonsense are trying to reverse course. Just a few days ago, The Centers for Disease Control admitted some of its failures concerning COVID-19 and abruptly changed course. Americans were told “never mind” – no more mass testing and quarantines for most; and the CDC stated that the unvaccinated should not be treated differently than the vaccinated.

The “Great Rollback” continues. The White House COVID-19 Czar has just admitted that a COVID policy at the center of life in COVIDLAND was not supported by any scientific evidence.

The mere fact that the White House and other government officials refer to Dr. Ashish Jha as a “Czar” should be alarming to all Americans. “Czar” is a term that historically referred to rulers of Russia. Ivan the Terrible was a czar, for example, who tortured and put to death his political rivals using techniques such as boiling people alive, impalement, roasting over an open fire, and being torn from limb to limb by horses. People living under his rule lived in a permanent state of fear.¹ Sort of like what the “COVID Czars” have inflicted on Americans. But I digress.

At a White House Press conference, Czar Jha reported that there was no evidence to support the 6-foot social distancing rule. He said that during the COVID debacle “a lot of time” was spent “talking about six feet of distance, 15 minutes of being together. We realize that’s actually not the right way to think about this.” Instead, according to one of our rulers, the quality of the air is more important. Jha added that people can be “outside for long periods of time” and not get infected. Apparently, there was no justification for closing beaches and parks.

Jha’s announcement was not accompanied by any apologies for the harassment and humiliation many Americans endured while being told to stand on circles and to avoid all close human interaction. Or the loss of revenue businesses suffered while limiting the number of people who could dine in restaurants or shop at one time. “Never mind, you can go back to normal now” is the message of the day. It seemingly has never occurred to these people that “never mind” is not an appropriate response after terrorizing people for a couple of years.

Scott Gottlieb, former FDA commissioner, also weighed in on social distancing. Gottlieb said that most people think that the 6-foot rule came from studies showing that droplets do not travel more than six feet. But, he says, this is not true; officials just made it up. According to Gottlieb, the CDC recommended 10 feet, and the 6-foot rule was a compromise between the CDC and Trump administration officials. The scientific rigor used to destroy people really does take your breath away!

Gottlieb elaborates, "Now imagine if that detail had leaked out. Everyone would have said, 'This is the White House politically interfering with the CDC's judgment.' Gottlieb says that the CDC said 10 feet, but 10 feet was no more right than six feet and ultimately became three feet."²

I suppose we can all be grateful that the negotiations regarding social distancing never leaked out. Many of the worst COVID dictators would have happily adopted "CDC guidance" and instituted the 10-foot rule which would have ended civilization as we know it. Even the "essential" big box stores would have had difficulty complying with this nonsense.

Look for more disclosures in the near future. And resignations. The COVID narrative is falling apart, and criminals who have spent over two years drunk with power while accountable to no one are starting to panic. It's going to get very interesting very soon!
